

Once upon a time, there was a(n) _____ musician. His/her name was _____ (adjective) (name)

and he/she played the _____. He/she had been playing for _____ years (musical instrument) (number) and had even given his/her instrument a name - _____. He/she was quite talented, (literary character)

and the other musicians nicknamed him/her "The _____." He/she (adjective) (animal)

was currently preparing for an audition in _____, so he/she had been _____-ing (country) (verb)

a lot more recently to prepare. On the morning of the audition, he/she drank _____ and (alcoholic beverage)

ate _____ before taking the _____ to perform. When he/she arrived (disgusting food) (mode of transportation)

at the venue, he/she was _____ to run into _____.
(emotional state) (famous musician)

"What are you doing here?" _____ asked.
(same name)

"I came here to _____ you." _____ replied.
(verb) (same famous musician)

"I won't lose this competition without a fight!" _____ retorted.
(same name)

"A duel it is then! I'll begin with the _____." _____ declared _____.
(difficult musical piece) (same famous musician) (adverb)

His/her interpretation was _____, but _____ wasn't worried - his/her (adjective) (same name)

recent performance of _____ was described by critics as " _____ as (same difficult piece) (adjective)

a(n) _____."
(natural phenomenon)

After _____ finished, _____ began to play, the notes _____-ing out (same famous musician) (same name) (action verb)

of the instrument like _____. It was obvious that _____ was the winner of this (type of bug, plural) (same name)

duel. _____ threw his/her _____ and _____-ed (same famous musician) (part of an instrument) (verb depicting movement)

out of the room in defeat. _____ retained his/her place as the best musician, and from that day (same name)

forward, he/she became known as the _____ of the _____.
(leadership role) (same instrument)